

Grace In The Wilderness

Title: Grace In The Wilderness: A Family's Story of Love, Loss, and Redemption

Authors: Scott, Hasha, and Libra Riley

Genre: Nonfiction: Self Help & Self Improvement, Relationships, Parenting & Family, Biography, History, Psychology & Psychotherapy

Synopsis: Honest, painful, and triumphant, Grace In The Wilderness is a riveting memoir of one man's battle to reclaim his life from a raging heroin addiction that began when he was just a 19-year old kid from a New York suburb, forced to descend mid-air out the gunner's door of a U.S. Army chopper into the battlefields of Vietnam. Woven throughout this stark tale of war, violence, and drug addiction, is a love story, unrequited though it might have been for many years, between a father and his daughters.

Family-authored and self-published, Grace in the Wilderness chronicles the harrowing 30-year odyssey of Scott Riley and his twin daughters, Hasha and Libra—a labyrinth of addiction, illness, death, and family betrayal, punctuated by resounding moments of compassion and peace amidst the chaos. Grace In The Wilderness is a poignant account of a recovering family's struggle toward healing, and how their faith and forgiveness ultimately triumphs over tragedy.

What began as an exchange of personal letters and stories between Libra, Hasha, and Scott through his initial stage of drug rehabilitation has become a collection of inspiration and hope for families still desperately seeking their way.
